

THEY'RE IN THE SOUP

The Daily Courier, Syracuse, NY, Wednesday, February, 6, 1889

"DEACON" AND MRS. KELLY ARRESTED ON THREE SEALED INDICTMENTS.

Deputy Sheriff Frank Piggle went to Kelly's Road House late Monday Afternoon and arrested the wife of the proprietor, against whom, jointly with her husband, three indictments were returned by the last Grand Jury, one for keeping a disorderly house, another for maintaining a gambling resort and a third for selling liquor on Sunday. Soon after reaching the Court House she gave bail in $500 on each of the charges. George H. Curtis and Alexander Scotts who compose the wholesale liquor firm of Scotts & Curtis, signing the bonds.

Mr. Kelly was not at home at the time, but Mr. Piggle found him at the Road house yesterday morning, however, and brought him here upon warrants charging him with the same offenses as those alleged against his wife. Mr. Kelly was released at noon upon bail furnished by Patrick Halloran of Halloran & McCarthy.

The Grand jury undertook the investigation on its own account as the result of the evidence brought out during the examination into the case of Henry N. Goff, the young Rochester telegrapher, who stayed for sometime at the Road House and who while there "did up" the proprietor to the tune of $500, with a forged note. Goff himself testified that while he was there he lost $40 or $50 in a poker game in which two or three gamblers from this city took part. Goff's evidence also went to show the alleged disreputable character of the road House and similar testimony was given by a woman of the town.

The Kellys came here about two years ago and established themselves in the restaurant business in Warren street. They kept a high priced place which was sold at advantageous terms some time last winter, and then they fitted up in luxurious style the resort that has since been known as Kelly's Road House.