

WITNESS TELLS OF ROSENTHAL'S DEATH

A. T. Shaughnessy, Who Saw the Killing, in Town.

NOT ABLE TO IDENTIFY

Says He Can Swear to the Men He Saw in the Gray Car When the Trial Comes—One Gunman Sick in Advance.

great value and thinks the new papers exaggerated his knowledge of details of the murder.

"I had been to the boxing bouts at Madison Square Garden that evening," Mr. Shaughnessy told a Herald reporter.

"I yelled at them when I saw the fellow hanging out but they went on and by turned around toward the club. A few seconds later a shot was fired and I looked back just as the bullet began to walk and then the smoke from the car's exhaust pipe hid everything.

"The car wasn't going fast and I could see five men, I think it was, all stepping over the top of the car for I could see them. Three fellows had jumped into the car just as I turned around when the firing began and the car was moving all the time. I saw them all, however, when they passed the club the first time.

"They went east on Forty-third street to Sixth avenue and turned up the avenue. It was less than five minutes later that the police followed in a taxi.

"I went to where the man they shot was lying on the sidewalk and was wiping the blood from his face. He said that he had got Herman, and I didn't catch on then that it was the rambler. Rosenthal lay there with his left hand held below his head and his right arm thrown out. His legs were crossed like he had been placed that way by some one. Blood was pouring from his face as the fellow at his side wiped it off.

"Body Left on Sidewalk. He lay there an hour before an ambulance came, and then the doctor stepped out, looked over the body and jumped back in the ambulance and drove away. A short time later a patrol came and the officers played a card game and examined the body and the surroundings, and it wasn't until nearly 4 o'clock that the body was removed.

"I have seen some shooting in Mexico and in the West, but I never saw anything quite so queer as this one. I don't believe that I could identify the men, for their faces were covered when they came back. I got a good look at them, however, and papers examined my memory gave me a lot of information about the case.

SAYS RAILROADS ARE EVADING LAW

Mr. Berry Declares Freight Rates Are Advanced.

OVERCHARGES HIGHER

Sudden Increase Called Attention to in Quarterly Report of Secretary of Syracuse Traffic Bureau—Difficulty Predicted.

Are railroad companies trying to get around the Interstate Commerce commission's order forbidding them to advance rates? This is the reason given by Minister Frank Berry of the traffic bureau for a sudden increase in overcharges found in freight bills.

Mr. Berry said he attributed this increase to the fact that carriers, protected by the commission from raising rates in their class rate tariffs appear now to be endeavoring to increase their revenue by advancing the classification of many articles.

Billings is being frequently corrected and charges advanced by arbitrary rulings of freight inspectors often causing much injustice and trouble Mr. Berry said.
