teacher of District School No. 7, is very much at a loss to know where to keep school. Her charges, however, "don't care whether school keeps or not."

"I haven't any idea of where we will hold school," Miss Albertine said. "There is going to be a special meeting of the School Commission next week, and possibly they will find a building we can use."

John Wilkinson, his son, Leonard, and several boys of the neighborhood were in the Wilkinson barn when the storm first appeared. Mr. Wilkinson told the boys to run into the house, but before they could cover the intervening distance they were caught up in the swirl of the tornado and scattered over the yard.

One lad landed in a tree and Mr. Wilkinson recovered his footing just in time to keep his son from tumbling into a creek. When the storm passed Mr. Wilkinson returned to his barn and released his horses, which were pinned under fallen timbers.

Can't Find Farm Implements.

Earl Benz, who lives more than a half mile west of the Cicero road, will be looking for his farm implements and wagons a week from now. A heavy farm wagon was picked up in the vortex of the tornado and was deposited on a hillside a few yards from the plank road. A harrow and a pair of bob-sleighs are missing. Mr. Benz lost his barn and three-fourths of his house.

With Joseph Jones of No. 1061 North Clinton street, Leo Mangal of No. 423 Sunset avenue was playing in the rear of the home of William Davis on one of the roads paralleling the Cicero road, about a mile from Fitcher Hill, when the tornado first appeared. The boys tried to run into the house but they were picked up, whirled about in the air for several seconds and finally landed in a pile of hay.

"I'm the luckiest man in the county," exclaimed Clifford Plummer, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Plummer, on the Clay Corners road, whose home, barn and sheds were carried away.

Mr. Plummer, sr., was away when the tornado paid its visit and knew nothing about it until 11 o'clock yesterday morning, when a rural mail carrier told him about it.

Clifford was in the second story of the house attempting to put down windows against the heavy rain when the door into the room where he stood slammed and then the outer door closed with a bang.

Plank Blown Past Head.

"Half a second later I thought I heard someone shouting back of me," he said yesterday. "A ten foot plank shot through first the outside door, then the door into the bedroom and before I could say 'Jack Robinson' it whizzed right past me through the window. Then the rest of the house went."

Mr. Plummer's cutter was carried from the sheds back of the barn to the front of the house, a distance of 30 yards, but it was not overturned. A binder which had not been in use for three years was back of the barn imbedded ten inches in the mud. It was picked up and carried 100 feet, mud and all.

Mrs. Charles Sherwood tumbled through a second story window of her home on the Phoenix road and glided to the earth accompanied by several square yards of roofing tin and scores of timbers. She doesn't know how it happened. The last she remembers is having gone upstairs to close some windows. She was around the farm yesterday helping her husband and the men at work.

Souvenir hunters were more numerous than photographers on the farms near the main highway. At the Thomas E. Bennett farm on the Cold Springs road, about a mile from Long Branch two of them dived for a "God Bless Our Home" in an old-fashioned varnished frame under a pile of debris. They pulled it out together and then argued as to who should take it. Finally they compromised, one taking the frame and the other the motto.

Watch Found Still Running.

Mrs. Bennett lost her gold watch and chain in the ruins and it was missed early Sunday night. It is a valuable time-piece, and an all-night search was made for it without success. At 11 o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Bennett stumbled across a polished oak table top, turning it over with his boot. Hundreds of persons had walked over it, but underneath imbedded in pulverized porcelain, was the little hunting case watch—running.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR INDIGESTION BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION

Better than castor oil, calomel or cathartics to cleanse your stomach, liver and bowels. Harmless Laxative for men, women and children.

Primitive folks did not need laxatives. They lived outdoors, ate plenty of fruit, and all of their food was coarse. We modern people are different. We exercise too little, eat little fruit, and our food is too fine—too rich.

"We simply can't have our ten yards of bowels clogged up, liver choked with sour bile and stomach full of foul effluvia together and feel well. It means that the food and waste retained in the stomach and thirty feet of bowels ferments—decays. The decay creates poisons, gases and acids, and those poisons are sucked into the blood through the very ducts intended to suck in the nutriment. Then we have sick headaches, become dull, bilious, tongue coated, nervous, meals don't digest, and we feel miserable all over. We must make our choice. We must live like primitive folks, else we must

PAVILION AT LONG BRANCH IN CENTER OF STORM'S PATH

Opinion of Prof. Sanford of Weather Bureau After Investigation—Believes Tornado Started Near Cross Lake—High Ground Suffered Most Damage.

Prof. Morgan R. Sanford, chief of the government weather station in this city, yesterday afternoon inspected the devastated country and fully confirmed his early opinion that the storm was a genuine tornado.

Data he gathered will be embodied in a report which will be sent to the Weather Bureau at Washington, accompanied by photographs. The report probably will be published in the bureau's bulletin, as the disturbance was unprecedented in the meteorological annals of this section. A brief report of the storm was telegraphed to the bureau yesterday.

"Aside from the testimony of persons who saw the storm approaching in the form of two dark, vertical columns," said the forecaster last evening, "Long Branch supplied further convincing evidence that the occurrence was properly described as a 'tornado.'"

"Near the dancing pavilion five trees had been torn down and lay cross-cross. This group of trees undoubtedly were in the center of the storm's path.

"Facing eastward, the direction traveled by the tornado, I observed that the trees on the right hand had fallen forward, so to speak, and those at the left in the opposite direction.

"This showed that the circulation of the wind was in the direction opposite that traveled by the hands of a watch. That whirl to the left is the invariable motion of a tornado."

Other things characteristic of the work of a tornado were observed amid the wreckage at Fitcher Hill and vicinity.

"It was very noticeable," continued Prof. Sanford, "that objects on elevated ground suffered the worse. This indicated that the storm was more intense at some distance above the lowlands."

He was of the opinion that the tornado may have formed in the vicinity of Cross Lake. He was most impressed by the comparatively small number of casualties among the 300 persons at Long Branch.

"I was surprised that scores of persons were not killed. Their escape was probably due to the fact that they took refuge in the low buildings which are protected by trees."

"Had the tornado struck Syracuse, it would have swept a path through the city. It had force to demolish big, strong business blocks."

Farm on Collamer Road Devastated by the Storm

Reports of homes on isolated crossroads that were swept away by Sunday evening's tornado are still finding their way into Syracuse.

A farm belonging to Parmelee & Ames of Syracuse, owners of the Palace Laundry, was decimated by the terrific gust of wind that ripped its way from Long Branch to North Syracuse. The owners did not hear of their loss until yesterday afternoon, as the property is located on a crossroad running into the Collamer road about two miles north of Messina Springs.

The farm was tenanted by Orin May and his family. The farmhouse was swept from its foundations and its interior and its furnishings wrecked. Two large barns were demolished and the crops stored in them carried away. A hen coop and a pig sty disappeared entirely.

BOYS' HIF FRACTURED.

Canastota Youth Hurt Trying to Prevent Runaway.
CANASTOTA, Sept. 16.—Mario Solomone, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. V. Solomone, received a fracture of the right thigh to-day in attempting to prevent a horse he was driving from running away. The lad stopped the horse in front of a store, pending minor repairs to the harness, when a motor truck was driven by, frightening it. The animal ran north in Peterboro street, with the youth clinging to the bridge. He was thrown to the pavement and one wheel of the wagon passed over his leg.

John I. Warner removed the youth in the former's automobile to the Emergency Hospital. Dr. J. W. Knapp was summoned and reduced the fracture.
